Dear Brothers and Sisters,

I hope you have had a great week, and that you have been able to enjoy these summer days.

Since there has been so much talk about immigration lately, I thought it would be useful to look at what the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops has to say for Church guidance on the subject. Here is the Catholic Church Teaching on Vulnerable Migrant Populations. This information is from the Migration and Refugee Services/Office of Migration Policy and Public Affairs of the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops, promulgated in January 2011. This is part one of a two-part article. Let us take the time to read it and reflect on this issue.

FROM THE PASTOR

PART I

Protection of Vulnerable Migrant Populations

Migrants to the United States oftentimes face potential harms and hardships, from being prey to human traffickers and smugglers engaged in extortion, and oftentimes violence, to being exposed to perilous conditions in the search for safety and protection. Among the migrants most vulnerable to such harms are refugees, asylum seekers and unaccompanied alien (undocumented) minors.

Refugees and asylees are aliens who are unable or unwilling to return to their country of origin or nationality because of persecution or a well-founded fear of persecution on account of their race, religion, nationality, membership in a particular social group, or political opinion. Refugees receive permission to immigrate to the United States while they are still abroad. Pursuant to the U.S. Refugee Act of 1980 and based on the 1951 UN Refugee Convention, any alien who is physically present in the United States or at a U.S. port of entry may apply for asylum, regardless of their current immigration status. Asylum seekers can submit a request for asylum either affirmatively or defensively. Asylum is granted after an individual's application has been processed and approved. Both refugees and asylees are eligible to apply for lawful permanent resident status after one year of continuous presence in the United States as a refugee or asylee.

Each fiscal year, the president, in consultation with Congress, determines the number of refugees to be admitted to the U.S. Refugee Resettlement Program. There is no similar cap on the number of asylum applications or asylum approvals. In 2008, only 23,000 principal applicants and their derivative family members were granted asylum. One third of these were fleeing persecution, or had a well-founded fear of persecution, in China, Colombia, and Haiti. That same year, little more than 60,000 refugees were admitted to the United States through the U.S. refugee resettlement program.

Customs and Border Protection (CBP) is one of the Department of Homeland Security's (DHS) primary immigration enforcement agencies responsible for handling unaccompanied children. CBP apprehends, processes and detains unaccompanied alien (undocumented) children intercepted along the U.S. borders and at ports of entry for attempting to enter the United States without authorization. In fiscal year 2009, CBP agents apprehended about 18,000 unaccompanied alien (undocumented) minors in border areas, while conducting routine checks at highway checkpoints, and performing border security enforcement operations. From March to September 2009, some 2,000 unaccompanied alien (undocumented) minors were apprehended at ports of entry. Between December 2008 and June 2010, in turn, nearly 4,000 unaccompanied alien (undocumented) minors were removed from the United States.

Next weekend, Part II will include the Catholic Social Teaching and the USCCB (United States Conference of Catholic Bishops) Position.

You are in my prayers and thoughts each day. May God bless you with the very best.

Always in the Savior, Fr. Joe
